

TYOLOGY

Portland Precidents: The next set of relationships which we began to investigate were those within the Portland Metro area. What has been built? What would we consider to be exemplary models for what we shall be designing? What scale relationships exist with these building types and how have they affected the development of both our culture and zoning code? One of the beauties of Portland, is that it is a town composed of many smaller village nodes. Therefore, we went to neighborhoods such as: Alberta, Clinton, Hawthorne, Irvington, NorthWest, the Pearl, and Sellwood. In these areas, we were able to find a multitude of ideas about material, form and pedestrian relationships to the urban context of place.
